Council's Decision-Making Process Overview

The Florida Coordinating Council on Mosquito Control's consensus-building and decision-making process is a participatory one whereby on matters of substance, the members jointly strive for agreements which all of the members can accept, support or at least agree not to oppose. In instances where, after vigorously exploring possible ways to enhance the members' support for the final decision on an issue or package of recommendations, and where 100% acceptance or support is not achievable, final recommendations of the Council will require at least a 75% favorable vote of all members present and voting. This super majority decision rule underscores the Council's view of the importance of seeking and developing agreements with the participation of all members and with which all can live with and support. The Council will make decisions only when a quorum is present. A quorum shall be constituted by at least 51% of the appointed members being present (simple majority). Council Members, staff, and Facilitator will be the only participants seated at the table. Only Council members may participate in discussions and vote on proposals and recommendations. After discussion and public comment, a council member may make a motion to approve the issue. If there is a second to the motion the Chair/Facilitator will call for discussion. Once a motion is made and seconded the discussion will be restricted to only Council members unless the Chair/Facilitator requests specific clarification from a member of the public. Members may request specific clarification from a member of the public through the Chair/Facilitator. A member may wish to second a motion for purpose of Council discussion and not necessarily as a show of support for the motion. Only motions to approve will be considered (no motions to disapprove). If there is no motion after discussion the requested action is not approved.
